

Abstract

A test tool enables the testing of multiple variable air volume (VAV) boxes from a single location in a building environmental system. The test tool includes a building level network interface and a test program for sending a test parameter to a plurality of VAV boxes so that measurements of air flow characteristics may be obtained at the plurality of VAV boxes.